

A trip to Moon

Once the rocket had got beyond the earth's atmosphere, the moon looked like a white big ball. The astronauts, who had been specially trained for this difficult journey, did their best to get the knowledge about Moon. After the rocket landed on the moon, the astronauts got out and put the scientific instruments on its surface. They were wearing heavy suits so that they could avoid the harmful solar rays that come from the sun. The astronauts explored a very small spot on the moon. They collected some soil from the surface of the moon. The moon landscape was fantastic. It would be impossible for human beings to live there because there is no air there. From this distance, the earth looked like a blue ball. After the astronauts had finished their work, the rocket began its long journey back to earth.
